

Loggerhead sea turtle nesting

Walton County, Florida

Loggerhead in her body pit covering her nest

back to the water after nesting

Almost done

Thanks for nesting here

Turtle tracks back into water

A fox was watching her nest

Loggerhead nest on Beach

hatchlings from another nest

- We are proud to be volunteers of the South Walton Turtle Watch. Every morning from May 1 until October we walk the beaches of Walton County looking for sea turtle nests. We are on the beach at 5:30 a.m. in heat and rain but when we can see even a track, it is exciting. A few times we have had experiences such as this and find a nesting sea turtle on the beach, this is just such a time. Other times we find the tracks and then take care of the nest. After a nest has hatched we evaluate the nest. We are a very dedicated group.